G.A.R. Ranks Are Thinning And Local Post Membership Now Numbers Only 5 of 400

When Gettysburg pays tribute to its soldier dead on Memorial Day, May 30, not more than nine civil war veterans will participate, and in all probability infirmities will keep a number of them away.

Each succeeding Memorial Day finds the ranks of the Boys in Blue more depleted, and this year will be no exception.

Of the five surviving members of the Corporal Skelly G. A. R. post, No. 9, here, only four are expected to attend the Memorial Day exercises. The fifth resides in Washington, D. C., and will be prevented by the infirmities of advanced years from attending.

4 Post Members Here

The post members who may attend the exercises in the National cemetery at which Governor George H. Earle will speak, are Major Calvin Gilbert, 95, Springs avenue; John Fidler, 91, of Biglerville; John Sheets, 92, Gettysburg R. D., and Dr. R. B. Elderidge, 88, of McKnightstown.

The fifth member of the local post, J. W. Bodley, 93, resides in Washington, D. C., but illness will prevent his attendance at the Memorial Day exercises.

Five other civil war veterans reside in Adams county, and there is a likelihood that some of them will be able to be present on May 30. They are Adam Bucher, 98, of Cash-town; J. C. D. Lower, 87, of Cash-town; Sr.-th Martin, 88, of Gardner R. D.; George W. Krug, 88, Gardner town R. D., and John Heintzleman, 90, of Cashtown.

Once Had Over 400

At one time, the Corporal Skelly post had a membership of more than 400. But the ravages of time have depleted its ranks until only five survive. The post no longer has a commander and no longer holds meetings. The post home on East Middle street has been taken over by the Sons of Union veterans, and the task of arranging Memorial Day programs has been delegated to the younger organization.

Hanover Orators Win Eastern Triangle Forensic League Title, Friday.

TO HOLD FINALS HERE APRIL 13TH

The Antietam Incident --- Lincoln's Delight in Song

President Prepared Reply to Attackers But It Was Not Published.

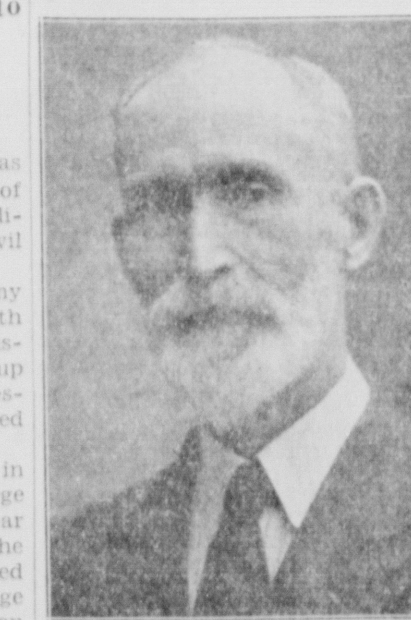

By WILLIAM C. STORRICK

THE battle of Antietam was fought on the 17th day of September 1862, and was the bloodiest one day's battle of the civil war.

General Lee withdrew the Army of Northern Virginia to the south side of the Potomac at Shepherdstown on the 18th and retreated up the Shenandoah valley to Winchester, Virginia, where it remained until the latter part of October.

The Army of the Potomac in command of Major General George B. McClellan remained on and near the battlefield of Antietam until the 26th of October when it was moved to the east side of the Blue Ridge on a parallel line held by Lee on the west side.

Before McClellan began this movement President Lincoln visited him and together with Marshal Lamon and some others went over the recent battlefield, and it was his "Recollections of Abraham Lincoln" as follows:—

Love of Song

IN the autumn of 1862 I chanced to be associated with Mr. Lincoln in a transaction which, though innocent and commonplace in itself, was blown by rumor and surmise into a revolting and deplorable scandal. A conjectural lie, although mean, misshapen, and very small at its birth, grew at length into a tempest of defamation, whose last echoes were not heard until its noble victim had yielded his life to a form of assassination only a trifle more deadly.

Mr. Lincoln was painted as the prime mover in a scene of fiendish levity more atrocious than the world had ever witnessed since human nature was shamed and degraded by the capers of Nero and Commodus. I refer to what is known as the Antietam song-singing; and (Continued on Page Six)

APPROVE BONDS OF COLLECTORS IN COURT TODAY

Five Presented Here This Morning Bringing Total Thus Far to 19.

GRAND JURORS MEET APRIL 19

Bonds of five additional tax collectors, a total of 19 to date, were approved by Judge Donald P. McPherson in court this morning.

The collectors whose bonds were approved today and the amount of each bond follow:

John M. McCadden, New Oxford, $11,000; J. D. Ernst, Latimore township, $6,455; Edward L. Bowers, Butler township, $5,870; Robert D. Peters, Bendersville, $3,750, and Mervin Miller, Mt. Joy township, $5,350.

Two opinions were filed by the court in orphans' court division. In an action taking exception to the sale of real estate for the payment of debts of James R. Weaver, late of New Oxford, the court ruled that the sale of a parcel of real estate, known as Tract No. 2, be set aside and the administrator was directed to make a resale.

Directs Grand Jurors

In the other opinion, the court referred back to the auditor, his report of a distribution in the estate of Annie B. Carver, deceased, and directed the auditor to make distribution in accordance with the conclusions asset forth in the opinion.

The divorce action brought by John E. Thomas against his wife, Mildred (Gulden) Thomas, was set down for argument on May 20.

The court directed the grand jurors for the April term of court to convene her on Friday morning, April 19, for the consideration of bills of indictment presented to them by District Attorney John P. Butt. The April term of court begins on Monday, April 22.

SELL 19 GAME COCKS FOR $25

Sheriff Wible and Justice Shealer Unable to Recall Purchaser's Name.

The 19 game roosters, seized by state police in a raid on a cock fight in Midway, Thursday evening, were sold this morning for $25.

Sheriff John C. Wible, to whom the chickens were entrusted by state police, and Justice of the Peace John C. Shealer, who got the proceeds of the sale, said they did not know the name of the purchaser.

District Attorney John P. Butt, who authorized the sale of the roosters, could not be located for the name of the purchaser.

Money from such transaction is usually turned over to a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. There is no such organization in Adams county, and Justice Shealer said the proceeds would probably be turned over to the Adams county directors of the poor.

The owner of the garage in which the game cock fight was in progress and 13 spectators were arrested in the raid and fined by Justice Shealer.

MRS. H. RANDLE GETS 6 MONTHS AND $200 FINE

Former Local Dietitian and Lecturer Convicted of False Pretense Charge.

FILES APPEAL TO HIGH COURT

Mrs. Helen Gertrude Randle, self-styled dietitian and lecturer, who served a fruit-juice concoction as part of her remedial cures for varied ailments among Gettysburg and Adams county residents two years ago and who left a crippled Lancaster girl alone in the mountains near here when she "broke camp," failed to elude the clutches of the courts in Harrisburg Friday.

Mrs. Randle, charged with false pretense in which Parrish and company, Harrisburg brokers, declare they suffered a loss of approximately $3,900, was sentenced to serve six months in jail and pay a fine of $200.

Homer L. Kreider, her attorney, secured Mrs. Randle's release under a $1,000 cash bail pending an appeal to the superior court.

Urge Leniency

The sentence of six months in jail and the $200 fine was imposed by the Harrisburg court despite presentation of several letters from United States senators recommending leniency.

Letters in behalf of Mrs. Randle were presented to Judge Fox from United States Senator Duncan W. Fletcher, of Florida, chairman of the Senate Banking committee; United States Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, former governor of Georgia and a student of Mrs. Randle; United States Senator James B. Byrnes and United States Senator Ellison D. Smith, chairman of the Senate Agricultural committee, both of South Carolina; United States Senator John H. Bankhead, of Alabama, and Congressman J. J. McSwain, Greenville, Ga., chairman of the house committee on military affairs.

Mrs. Randle became involved in the action in August, 1933, when Parrish and company accused the "dietitian and lecturer" with false pretense.

At a preliminary hearing in Harrisburg Mrs. Randle was held for action of the grand jury.

Ordered Stock Purchase

Witnesses at the hearing testified that Mrs. Randle ordered $11,000 worth of stock purchased by Parrish and company, for her, submitting a written statement in her handwriting, specifying the stocks to be purchased and at what price.

Witnesses testified the stocks comprised 100 shares of Philadelphia and Reading coal and Dismissed Collector of Internal Revenue To Be Lawrence's Assistant.

Harrisburg, March 30. — Alvin F. Fix, of York, who quit his federal post as collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia at the demand of President Roosevelt last June, will become deputy secretary of the commonwealth on Monday.

It was learned Friday at the capitol that Fix is to become chief assistant to Secretary of the Commonwealth David L. Lawrence who also is Democratic state chairman. The post, which Frank E. Wood, of Sayre, Bradford county, will relinquish to Fix, pays $5,000 a year.

Charges that Fix and several of his subordinates in the United States Internal Revenue office in Philadelphia forced employees of the office to contribute to the Democratic campaign fund in the Pennsylvania gubernatorial primary last year, led to an investigation by the civil service commission.

The commission, at the conclusion of its probe, recommended to President Roosevelt that Fix and his assistant collector, William E. Brown, be removed and that five of Fix's subordinates be suspended.

The commission reported that testimony from forty-seven employees of the revenue office revealed that it had been "suggested that it would be wise for them to make a contribution" to the campaign fund. The report also quoted the employees as saying that five per cent of their annual salaries had been "suggested" as the appropriate amount to be contributed.

ABDUCTOR WILL PAY WITH LIFE

Kidnapper of Kansas City Girl Must Die May 10; First in Country

Jefferson City, Mo., March 30 (AP). — Walter H. McGee, this first kidnapper to be sentenced to death in the United States must pay with his life for the ransom abduction nearly two years ago of Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager of Kansas City, the Missouri supreme court decreed today.

The court held that "the proof sufficiently substantiates the verdict of guilty" and that "the record discloses no error."

The court set the execution for May 10 in the Jackson county jail at Kansas City. Hanging is the method of execution in Missouri.

Miss McElroy was abducted from her South Side home about noon late in May, 1933, held for nearly 30 hours in the basement of a farm house and released on payment of $30,000 ransom by her father H. F. McElroy. Walter McGee, leader of the kidnapers was the only one of those convicted to receive the extreme penalty.

RAP EXTENSION OF BLUE EAGLE

Senatorial Critics Hammer Away at Roosevelt Administration's Bill.

Washington, March 30 (AP). — Senatorial critics of NRA hammered away today at the Roosevelt administration's bill to extend the blue eagle law for another two years. Meanwhile a crucial conference was called in an attempt to avert a call for a walkout of 500,000 soft coal workers next Monday morning.

The NRA through Chairman Donald R. Richberg had submitted a plan for peace in the coal wage crisis. Although it was emphasized that nothing was settled one informed source said it was a "good bet" that the walkout which the United Mine Workers insists would not be a strike would be averted.

Existing coal wage contracts expire Sunday night and the U. M. W. says the miners will not work without contracts. The NRA suggested that the present coal code be extended to June 16 when the effect of the law expires. This in effect would extend the wage contracts. Both sides planned to reply to the proposal at a meeting today with Richberg and the NRA board of which he is the new chairman.

Local Dog Wins Another Trophy

"Eagle Wing," two and one-half-year-old female pointer of Robert Bell, added new laurels to her field trial achievements, on Friday, when she won the Central Pennsylvania field trial association event, at Altoona, over a large field.

"Eagle Wing" was braced with a Harrisburg dog, considered the ranking pointer in the state, and won easily in the second series. This is the third time this year that "Eagle Wing" has defeated the Harrisburg dog.

The field included bird dogs from Virginia, Maryland and Pennsylvania.

Hamilton, Bandit, and Pal Release Hostages and Escape

Memphis, Tenn., March 30 (AP). —Raymond Hamilton, the South's most desperate criminal, and an unidentified wounded companion fresh from a new orgy of robberies, shooting and kidnapping, eluded officers here Friday after abandoning two hostages in the heart of the city.

Armed with two machine guns, several rifles and a number of pistols, the pair of desperadoes apparently headed out of Memphis immediately after leaving their hostages here, locked in the rear end of a coupe.

A bell hop said two men, one he believed was Hamilton, approached him at his hotel here Friday morning, not far from where the captives were abandoned, and inquired the route to West Memphis, Arkansas.

The men abandoned here were M. E. Smith, Jefferson county (Mississippi) farm agent, and Ralph Dayliss, Prentiss (Mississippi) merchant, who were abducted as hostages in the robbers' wild flight from Prentiss, where the outlaws looted a bank of $1,100.

Smith and Bayliss were members of a posse scouring the section around Prentiss following the bank hold-up. The bandits escaped after stealing four automobiles, shooting two persons and disarming the posse of which Smith and Bayliss were members.

Identify Hamilton Photos. At the police station here, where they were brought from Hernando, Mississippi, by Sheriff Sid Campbell, to whom they reported their kidnapping, Smith and Bayliss positively identified photographs of Hamilton from among photographs of several criminals.

After talking with Will T. Griffin, inspector of Memphis detectives, the men were taken to the federal building, where they were questioned at length by department of justice agents. Smith sold inspector Griffin that Hamilton's companion was shot in one cheek, the right hand, in the back and in one leg and was in a weakened condition.

Before entering Memphis the desperadoes run a gauntlet of officers in North and Central Mississippi.

Forced To Drive. "Hamilton had his machine gun on me, and I was forced to do most of the driving toward Memphis," Smith told police. Between Hernando and Memphis the gunmen stopped the car and made Bayliss change clothes with the wounded man. Bayliss had on the bullet-ridden clothing when he arrived here.

While Smith drove, Bayliss was locked in the rear of the car, and after Bayliss changed clothes with Hamilton's companion, he was forced to enter the rear compartment, also. "Stay in there now, and don't cause a ytrouble and we'll let you out when we get to Memphis," the men said Hamilton told them. When the car came to a stop here, Hamilton told the men to "be quiet," and "we'll be back as soon as we 'steal another car."

They failed to return and the two captives broke from their "prison" with a tire tool. They approached a cab driver and asked to be driven to Mississippi, to report to Sheriff Campbell.

Two Bombings Friday. Margiotti was asked specifically today if he would make an attempt to settle the strike. He replied he "might have something to say on that late in the day."

Meanwhile police of several nearby communities were investigating two dynamitings Friday and an explosion which occurred today. The latter was reported to state police to have occurred near Luzerne.

Governor Earle disclosed that the two officials were sent into the strike zone because of the "general seriousness" of the situation. Two deaths have been attributed directly to the strike by officials and the almost daily dynamitings have caused property damage running into thousands of dollars.

A special missionary program will be given at the Wexville Lutheran church Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock. Prof. W. H. Jacobs, of the Loysville orphans' home, will give an illustrated lecture on, "Loysville in Words and Pictures."

Four Planes Leave U. S., Their Destination Under Suspicion

Washington, March 30.—Four airplanes, bound from New Orleans to Arica, Chile, ostensibly to conduct aerial surveys with a view to the establishment of a new transport line, Friday became the center of speculation and suspicions extending all the way from Washington to the Bolivia-Paraguay war in the Gran Chaco.

The speculations dealt with the eventual destination of the planes, which were built in America as military craft for Bolivia, but had been sold to a private concern when the United States placed an embargo on the sale of arms and munitions of war to Bolivia and Paraguay.

Suspicious Aroused. The fact that the planes left New Orleans yesterday before department of commerce officials had ascertained whether they no longer were outfitted as military craft, had aroused suspicions that the actual destination of the craft might be Bolivia, in spite of the arms embargo.

Taking official cognizance of the speculation Friday, the state department issued a statement outlining the negotiations leading to the fight and explaining the precautions it had taken to make sure that the planes would not actually go to Bolivia. Cordell Hull, secretary of state, also discussed the matter at a press conference Friday.

SPAIN'S 12TH CABINET QUILTS

Quality of Mercy to Rebels in Recent Uprisings Is Cause of Break.

Madrid, March 30 (AP).—The quality of its mercy to rebels forced Premier Alessandro Lerroux's government out of office Friday.

President Niceto Alcalá Zamora—for the twelfth time since the birth of the second Spanish republic—is sounding out political leaders in an effort to create another ministry able to cope with the nation's problems.

Socialists quickly stepped forward to claim their place in the political sun.

The cabinet crisis was no more than announced than socialist headquarters announced that the socialists would continue to try to regain power "because all these governments, including Catholics, conservatives and other historical groups are illegal inasmuch as they are swerving the republic from its original purposes."

Demanding Death Penalty. Collapse of the Lerroux government, freely predicted since Rightists and Leftists took diametrically opposing stands concerning punishment to be meted out to some twenty alleged ringleaders of the October radical revolt, came without dramatists.

Rightists, the majority in congress, had insisted that death sentences imposed upon the Socialist Deputy Ramon Gonzalez Pena and others convicted of leading the bloody uprising be carried out. Leftists, reinforced by the Center groups, favored clemency.

The issue had its showdown at Friday's cabinet session. With further delay impossible, the cabinet majority voted to recommend clemency. Agrarian, Liberal democrat and Ceda ministers, adherents of the extreme right, immediately fulfilled their threat to resign, precipitating the crisis. While demonstrations in several parts of Spain, notably at Oviedo, where Pena is imprisoned and where an indignant mob shouted "death to Lerroux" protested the clemency decision, Lerroux went to the palace and handed President Alcalá Zamora the cabinet's collective resignation.

CARS COLLIDE; NONE ARE HURT

Machines Sideswipe and One Leaves Highway and Snaps Off Telephone Pole.

Two automobiles were badly damaged, but the occupants escaped injury, when the machines sideswiped on the New Oxford-McSherrystown road at Irishtown at 1:30 o'clock this morning.

After the machines sideswiped, the one car, a coupe left the highway and crashed into a telephone pole, snapping the pole off near the ground.

G. Edward Snyder, 17, Littlestown R. 2, was traveling toward McSherrystown, in a sedan. U. S. Richstien, Hanover, R. 3, was the driver of the other machine. Patrolman James G. Warren, of the local substation of the state highway patrol, said, Richstien was traveling toward New Oxford.

After the machines came together, Richstien's coupe left the highway and crashed into a telephone pole. Richstien's machine was practically demolished. Damage to Snyder's car was estimated by Patrolman Warren at $250. Both machines had to be towed away.

GREAT RICHES

by Mateel Howe Farnham.

SYNOPSIS: James Stinson, III, is to be married tomorrow to Jane Northrup, the rich girl picked for him by all the best people of New Concord, Kas. He cannot be sure that it is the memory of Leslie Harris which makes him dread the ceremony; he knows, however, that he resents Jane's forcing him to live in the expensive but ugly home furnished by her father instead of in the lovely old Stinson mansion. Wildly he decides to tell Jane the marriage must not be. But he knows he dare not.

Chapter 24

TEAPOT TEMPEST

James fell at last into an exhausted sleep. He was still sleeping soundly at nine next morning when Aunt Lou awakened him. "Miss Northrup's calling you on the telephone," Aunt Lou told him. "She seems terrible upset and wants that you should come right over there quick as you kin make it."

James' heart leaped high with hope as he hurried into his clothes, gulped down a cup of coffee and ran for a street car.

Jane didn't want to get married. Jane had the courage he lacked, the courage to save them both. He pushed the slow-moving car all the way down South Fifth Street and up North Fifth and jumped from it before it halted at Oak Street. Mrs. Northrup was waiting for him on the porch.

"You look very happy, young man," she said grimly and led the way into the front parlor.

"What's the matter? What's happened?" James asked; and still the feet that wanted to caper. He'd have to pretend of course to be sorry . . . horrified, and he wasn't good at pretending. Trust that old harpy to see through him. He'd better insist on seeing Jane alone. Good old Jane. He and she . . .

"It's the altar guild," Mrs. Northrup snapped, "or rather that hateful Mabel Webster. She won't allow Jane to have candles on the altar, and we've got such beautiful ones, hand-dipped. Jane was in hysterics. I had to give her a bromide. It does seem after all our work . . ."

"The altar guild?" James interrupted stupidly. "What's the altar guild got to do with it?"

James was a Congregationalist, the Northrups Episcopalians. James made out finally from Mrs. Northrup's confused explanation that the present Episcopal rector was high church and Mrs. Northrup low church. A year before, the rector, then new, had the effrontery to install candles on the altar and Mrs. Northrup unhappily, had fought the innovation tooth and nail.

Now the Janus-faced Mabel Webster had called up that very morning to say that the altar guild, knowing that Jane would not want to have her vows desecrated by candle light had sent the dedicated candle sticks to be repleted and refused absolutely to produce them in spite of persuasion and threats. Mrs. Northrup fairly bounced with rage.

"But . . . but is it so important?" James stammered. He was so disappointed he wanted to die.

"Not important to have Jane stabbed in the back? You of all people . . . of course it's important. The candles are an integral part of the decorations. A more heartless, cruel . . . I should think you could see that without being told."

"It doesn't seem very Christian," James said weakly.

"Christian? I should say it wasn't Christian. If Mabel Webster after this is admitted to a Christian Heaven. . ."

Mrs. Northrup had a great deal to say about Mabel Webster, about all the altar guild in fact. James looked so miserable that even Mrs. Northrup was satisfied.

At that moment the telephone bell rang shrilly. Mrs. Northrup hastened to answer it. James heard her cry sharply, "It simply isn't possible. I will not, Mr. Northrup and I will not allow it." A silence. Then, "This is the last straw. I shall certainly appeal to the bishop." She hung up.

Mrs. Northrup had left the room red-faced and defiant. She returned white-faced and trembling, broken and suddenly old. James got out of her finally that it was the society reporter calling up to point out to her that the wedding, scheduled to take place that evening at eight-thirty o'clock, conflicted with the weekly prayer meeting hour. No one had thought, no one had remembered about prayer meeting.

And now the society reporter said she had been reliably informed that Dr. Morton had stated that he would delay the prayer meeting until after the ceremony, but that he could not refuse admission to the church to any member of his congregation who assembled for prayer meeting at the regular hour.

Jane's wedding list had been carefully gone over and expurgated. Many had been invited, but more had not. Admittance was by card. Now, the entire riff-raff of the town was free to force its way into the church. Mrs. Northrup, for the first time in years, burst into hysterical tears.

It was a terrible hour. Mr. Northrup was sent for. Beyond vowing that the Reverend Dr. Morton should shortly be forced to resign or he would leave the church, Mr. Northrup offered no suggestions. "It was," he said over and over, "an outrage, yes, an unforgivable outrage."

Mrs. Northrup turned to James. "You must do something," she commanded sternly.

James, with a sudden flash of spirit, refused even to try to interfere. He said that the only dignified thing to do was to ignore the whole rumpus. After all, a few candles, a few uninvited guests, were of small moment unless they were made so. His advice was to assume a bold front, laugh it off—or be forever laughed at.

After long and acrimonious argument, in which James, to his pain and surprise, found himself cast unaccountably in the role of the culprit, his advice was accepted.

The Northrups would do nothing, except keep the last horror from Jane. James was dismissed in ignominy, not even allowed a sight of the stricken bride. He walked home slowly, a puzzled and abysmally gloomy young man. God, if he'd only had the sense to fall in love with an orphan.

When Jane had barely managed a measure of calm, James telephoned her at six o'clock, ostensibly to ask how she felt and in reality to tell her callously that she was not to mind about the candles, that it would be all the same in a hundred years and that she was to cheer up and forget all about it.

With the whole town laughing with even her bosom friends she had honored as bridesmaids running in and out all afternoon, twittering and whispering and pretending to be sympathetic, and actually blissful with pleased excitement, with Mabel Webster triumphant and Dr. Morton hiding from a just and awful wrath, James actually dared to take the whole shocking insult as a joke!

Jane could have screamed at him over the telephone that he was a heartless fool. If it had not been so late, if the governor and the senator and the justices were not already there across the street at Judge Holcomb's . . . all those thousands her father had spent . . . and Leslie Harris cooling off to Sam Fletcher, now that he had failed of his purpose of arousing James to active interference . . . that cat Leslie eager and anxious to snatch at James. . .

Jane hung up the telephone receiver and went slowly upstairs.

She must calm herself. She must breathe softly and regularly and still that awful thumping of her heart. Of course she loved James. It was only hysteria that fathered that sudden desire to beat him savagely in the face. All she asked from him was a little human understanding; and he had failed her.

This was to have been her great hour, the supreme climax of her girlhood. She had thought herself loved and admired. And she was laughed at—she, Jane Northrup! And James thought it funny. . .

At the head of the stairs her mother said firmly, "I've sent for Miss Minnie to come and give you a massage. Take a hot bath first and relax. I'll bring you your supper on a tray. You must relax."

Jane was only too glad to be taken in charge. As she lay in the scented water she managed somehow to make her mind a blank. Afterwards, completely massaged and rubbed with alcohol, her heart stopped its ominous pumping. She was able to eat her creamed chicken and drink the glass of sherry her father brought her. It was pleasant and comforting, to be fussed over, babled as if she had been a little girl.

Jane came of no weaking breed. "I'm all right now," she told her mother at seven o'clock. And she was. Slim and white and virginal, a little wistful and pathetic, but reasonably tranquil, she let herself be dressed in her wedding finery.

Jane sat still for a short while. Then rose and walked slowly to the long pier glass that stood by the windows. Not even Leslie Harris and Mabel Webster could truthfully deny that she was beautiful. (Copyright, 1935, Mateel H. Farnham)

—Looking Around—

Unless some move is made in the very near future league baseball in Adams county for 1935 is doomed. As yet no effort has been made to reorganize the firemen's league and, according to good authority, the county firemen's organization will not sponsor the circuit this year. Last season the league came to an unfortunate close when Bendersville and Arendtsville failed to get together for a title-deciding playoff.

York Springs has already organized for the coming year and has announced itself in favor of a league. Other teams have also voiced their desire for a league reorganization but none have taken the initiative toward calling a meeting.

The Gettysburg college baseball team looms as one of the strongest in many seasons. A powerful battery combination is the key. Two newcomers, "Doc" Bowers, who last summer pitched for New Freedom of the York-Adams league, and Sterling Ecker, of Littlestown, both right-handers, will bear the brunt of the pitching for the Bullets. Both loom as star hurlers. Bob Sassaman will probably clinch the catching post. A veteran infield of Johnny Cico, first; Buck Jones, second; "Mooney" Morris, shortstop, and Charlie Snyder, third base, is possible. Tony Kozma, converted from a pitcher, and George MacMillan are veteran candidates for the outfield. Other promising outfield candidates are Earl Worley and Joe Superka. Lefty Bollinger, star portsider, may be lost to the squad through ineptibility due to scholastic standing.

Mush ball, which proved so popular here last summer, may supplant baseball as a twilight sport during the coming summer months. Already formation of a ten-club league has been started and a great amount of interest has been shown. Last year games were played before large crowds on the upper field at the

Housekeeping in White House

No Light Housekeeping Job

Washington, March 30 (AP).—

Take the word of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, "one cannot be a light-hearted and happy-go-lucky housekeeper in the white house."

All the perplexing problems that other housekeepers have—rats to poison, curtains to be turned and darned, spring house cleaning—being also to the white house mistress.

And the whole machinery, she broadcast upon her return from New York Friday, is complicated by a double system of bookkeeping, in which all personal food and laundry is charged to the president's personal purse; all official food and laundry to the government.

Things She Found Out

Since she was shown through it by Mrs. Herbert Hoover before inauguration, Mrs. Roosevelt said she found out:

About rats and mice—

"In a building over 17 years old, maintenance becomes a constantly increasing item. Strange though it may seem, pipes will leak at frequent intervals, and rats and mice like old buildings, regardless of tradition."

About repairs—

"Practically every two years, the white house has to be completely painted and this is no task to be undertaken lightly, and is a tremendous expense."

Had to Repair Cornice

"We found, to our horror, the first year that we occupied the white house that the stone cornice was loose all the way round, and for the safety of those who might walk below it was absolutely necessary that it be repaired."

About "little economies"—

"We have found it necessary to buy inexpensive dollys and napkins and plated spoons for large entertainments."

And all the little economies practiced in any private home are practiced in the white house—curtains are turned, rugs which are worn are sent to be re woven or mended and

An Evening Thought

Life is thick sown with thorns,
And I know no other remedy than to pass quickly through them. The longer we dwell on our misfortunes, the greater is their power to harm us.—Voltaire.

Thou wilt say then, The branches were broken off, that I might be grafted in.

Well; because of unbelief they were broken off, and thou standest by faith. Be not high-minded, but fear:

For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee.

Behold therefore the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but toward thee, goodness, if thou continue in this goodness: otherwise thou also shalt be cut off.

And they also, if they abide not still in unbelief, shall be grafted in: for God is able to graft them in again.

For if thou wert cut out of the olive tree which is wild by nature, and wert grafted contrary to nature into a good olive tree; how much more shall these, which be the natural branches, be grafted into their own olive tree?

For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits, that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in.—Romans 11:19-25.

TAKE IT EASY.

I READ in my newspaper today of the statement of a noted physician in Chicago who said that one out of every four deaths in that city was caused by heart disease. Too much hurry, too much worry, too little relaxation.

Little do we realize the work which the heart performs. At the rate of 72 beats in a minute, we have the heart beating 103,680 times every 24 hours. This process is equivalent to the lifting of thousands of pounds a day, I am told. It is the heaviest worked organ in the bodily machine.
And it is the least respected. No wonder this wonderful machine of ours gives out long before its time, in so many instances!

The late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes lived to be nearly 94 years of age. He was the son of a humorous father, who also lived to a ripe old age. The justice was noted for his exemplary manner of living. He was moderate in all ways—but most of all he had a grand sense of humor and a quaint philosophy of his own. He walked past the unimportant!

Take it easy. It is kinder to the heart and one's peace of mind to obey the traffic signal than to risk one's life by dodging a dozen cars, and worrying as many drivers. Take time. There is always another street car. Tomorrow does not have to be lived today.

If it rains, that's God's affair. It never does any good to complain.
Be content and take it easy. Much more can be accomplished this way, for there is less lost motion.

Relaxation is really a rare art. The few seconds of relaxation that the tennis or golf player has between strikes is what gives to him his accuracy and power. We should try to discover the tempo of our make-up that serves us best, and regulate our lives accordingly. We should guard our reserves for the supreme moments.

I believe that it was Theodore Roosevelt who said: "When you work, work hard, but when you play, don't work at all." Take it easy—and make both work and play a pleasure. I believe that at least one day in even should be a day of glorious loafing!

PATTERN 9333

It would be difficult to say enough for this snappy little sports frock.
Marian Martin has formed an unusual and flattering line in cutting the yoke and sleeve effects in one—and incidentally, has simplified the frock's making. The clusters of tucks where bodice and yoke join are decorative and give exquisite fit.
A smart pocket, belt and buttons—and the picture is complete. You can contrast the yoke for a still different effect. At all events, by virtue of its simplicity and flattery, it's a dress you can wear anywhere, throughout the season. Washable silks, shantung, or cottons are delightful for its making.

Pattern 9333 may be ordered only
in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 3½ yards 36-inch fabric.

PATTERN 9334

You can do anything from lunch at a smart hotel to playing tennis in this frock, and be assured of your acclaim as a well-dressed woman!
Look at the detail sketches and see how stunning the frock is minus the cape—note that the smart collar is attached to the dress, and see the back-buttoned bodice. A good-looking, practical summer sports frock, we call it! Add the cape, then—and go wherever you please. By means of an easy Marian Martin pattern you can accomplish two outstanding silhouettes in one. It's grand in a crinkly crepe or shantung; in a colorful cotton or silk.
And you can lighten its fashion with contrasting accessories.

Pattern 9334 may be ordered only
in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34,

Anti-German Demonstrations
Staged by Poles Along Border

Katowice, Poland, March 30 (AP).—New found "friendship" between Poland and Germany went by the boards Friday as anti-German demonstrations flared all along the German eastern border.

Most violent demonstrations occurred at the Polish-German frontier where thousands of Poles formed protest parades against Germany.

Police scattered one mob just as it turned toward the German con-sulate.

Direct cause of the demonstrations here, it appeared, was the closing of the Polish high school in the nearby border town of Beuthen, an action that deprived it of the right to give final state examinations.

Storm Newspaper Plant
Some 5,000 persons, urged by their leader to get "revenge for the German imperialism" and "close the German schools in Poland," marched to the German newspaper Kattow-itzer Zeitung and smashed windows of its buildings.

Singing the "Rota Song," the Polish hymn of hate for Germany, the mob next tackled police cordons hastily thrown around the German consulate but was unable to break through.

Other demonstrations, less violent, occurred all along the border from Lithuania to Czechoslovakia.

An example of the tension along the Lithuanian border was the adoption of a resolution by the East Prussian medical society providing that henceforth no German physician will heed calls from across the border.

10-Year Pact On A ten-year pact of friendship and non-aggression between Germany and Poland was signed January 26, 1934.

At the recent Anglo-German conversations in Berlin, Adolf Hitler was reported to have pointed to that agreement as evidence of the ef-

THE NEEDED LITTLE

A little more of giving and little less of taking;
A little more of sensing what our neighbors have to bear;
A little more of pity for the ones to sorrow wailing
And we'd have more of laughter and less of bleak despair.

A little more of friendship and a little less of sneering;
A little more of trusting and a little less of doubt;
A little more of cheering and a little less of jeering
And we'd have more contentment and much less to fret about.

A little more of sharing and a little less of grasping;
A little more of loving and a little less of hate;
A little less of bickering and voices harshly rasping
And we should all be stronger when the need for strength is great.

A little more of charity and less of selfish dealing;
A little more of willingness another's need to see;
A little more of wisdom, both of knowing and of feeling And life would be the joyous thing it really ought to be.

A Milwaukee social center instructor almost knocked himself out when he struck his own nose with his fist while demonstrating a stunt.

THE PACIFIC CROSSING

I have mentioned the development of the Trans-Pacific air services in this column several times. Now definite information on the progress of this project is at hand and I will try to select some brief and interesting points from the mass of details to pass on to those who haven't followed the matter closely. Some idea of the magnitude of the undertaking may be gained from what follows.

The service will be operated by Pan-American airways, the most extensive air line in the world at the present time. The route lies from San Francisco to Honolulu, a distance of 2,410 miles, thence to Midway island, 1,320 miles, to Wake island, 1,260 miles, to Guam, 1,500 miles, to Manila in the Philippines, 1,600 miles. The trip is split up into an overnight flight from San Francisco to Honolulu and four daylight flights to Manila. The bases at San Francisco, Honolulu, and Manila will require only operation facilities to make them ready for use. Wake entirely uninhabited, Midway occupied only by a cable station, and Guam with limited resources, will require large scale development. Fortunately, all points on the route are American owned.

An airways-construction steamer is scheduled to leave San Francisco at the present time for a four months cruise. On it will go: a quarter million gallons of high octane gasoline, pumps, tanks, filters; section houses for complete, permanent colonies at Midway, Wake, and for the base at Guam; Diesel power plants for radio, lighting, pumping and refrigeration; pumps, wind mills, water stills, stoves, ovens, kitchen gear, house furnishing, food for six months after landing, tools and seeds for permanent gardens, cows, launches, lighters, and dock floats, radio transmitters, receivers and direction finders, masts, antennas and spars; meteorological instruments, septic tanks and plumbing, house wiring, beacon lights, maintenance tools and equipment, medical stores, executives, base managers, radio men, mechanics, engineers, workmen, artisans.

As the ship moves from base to base it will follow procedure planned in advance, leaving so much equipment at each stop and staying long enough to build each colony according to accurately calculated plans. What is now but a half dozen points on the map will have become complete, fully manned bases ready for months of full schedule operations on the world's most remarkable airway.

Actual operations are now being tested with an 18-ton Sikorsky flying boat fitted out as a complete flying laboratory. At the completion of these experiments, 25-ton Martin Clipper ships will be put in service carrying from 12 to 18 passengers, a ton of mail, and a 30 per cent fuel reserve on the Hawaiian hop. Higher pay loads will be carried on the shorter western flights.

Space does not permit a description of the radio facilities, but, needless to say, each base will be equipped with main and reserve transmitting and receiving stations which will prove more than adequate under all operating conditions.

This service will shorten the time of the present Pacific crossing from roughly three weeks to six days. Connections will be made at Manila for the mainland on the already existing line operated by Pan-American.

It is rather dangerous to prophesy the time of completion of such a vast project, but it is expected that full scheduled operations will be accomplished by late summer or early fall.

Can it be that there are still those

MAJESTIC

"Living on Velvet," a First National picture, is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Majestic theatre Monday and Tuesday.

It has an all-star cast, headed by Kay Francis, who has two leading men in Warren William and George Brent. The story tells of two men in love with the same girl, each of whom tries to give her up for the other man.

Brent, portraying a dashing daredevil, whose mental attitude toward life has been warped by a terrific airplane accident in which his parents and his sister are all killed, and he escaped, considers himself the same as a "dead" man, and rushes from one mad escapade to another.

GERMANY WANTS EMPIRE RESTORED

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler informed the British envoy, Sir John Simon, that he would like to see Germany's pre-war domain restored, according to dispatches from Berlin on their conversations there. The German empire, as it existed before the war, is shown in the map above. Top, is the Germany of 1914. Left, below, are Germany's African possessions, lost under the Versailles treaty, and right, Pacific possessions of the empire, also taken from her. (Associated Press Photo)

I propose to show that the popular construction put upon that incident was wholly destitute of truth.

Mr. Lincoln persistently declined to read the harsh comments of the newspaper press and the fierce mouthings of platform orators; and under his advice I as persistently refused to make any public statement concerning that ill-judged affair. He believed with Walter Scott, that if a cause of action is good, it needs no vindication from the actor's motives; if bad, it can derive none. When I suggested to him that the slander ought to be refuted, that a word from him would silence his defamers, Mr. Lincoln replied with earnestness: "No, Hill, there has already been too much said about this falsehood. Let the thing alone. If I have not established character enough to give the lie to this charge, I can only say that I am mistaken in my own estimate of myself. In politics, every man must skin his own skunk. These fellows are welcome to the hide of this one. Its body has already given forth its unsavory odor."

The newspapers and the stump-speakers went on "stuffing the ears of men with false reports" until in the fall of 1864, when I showed to Mr. Lincoln a letter, of which the following is a copy. It is a fair sample of hundreds of letters received by me about that time, the Antietam incident being then discussed with increased virulence and new accessions of false coloring.

Lincoln's Story

Philadelphia, Sept. 10, 1864.
Ward H. Lamon:
Dear Sir.—Enclosed is an extract from the New York "World" of Sept. 9, 1864:—

"One of Mr. Lincoln's jokes.—The second verse of our campaign song published on this page was probably suggested by an incident which occurred on the battlefield of Antietam a few days after the fight. While the President was driving over the field in an ambulance, accompanied by Marshal Lamon, General McClellan, and another officer, heavy details of men were engaged in the task of burying the dead. The ambulance had just reached the neighborhood of the stone bridge, where the dead were piled highest, when Mr. Lincoln suddenly slapping Marshal Lamon on the knee, exclaimed: 'Come, Lamon, give us that song about Picayune Butler; McClellan has never heard it.' 'Not now, if you please,' said General McClellan, with a shudder; 'I would prefer to hear it some other place and time.' This story has been repeated in the New York 'World' almost daily for the last three months. Until now it would have been useless to demand its authority. By this article it limits the inquiry to three persons as its authority, Marshal Lamon, another officer, and General McClellan. That it is a damaging story, if believed, cannot be disputed. That it is believed by some, or that they pretend to believe it, is evident by the accompanying verse from the doggerel, in which allusion is made to it:—

"Abe may crack his jolly jokes
O'er bloody fields of stricken battle,
While yet the ebbing life-tide
Smokes
From men that die like butchered cattle;
He, ere yet the guns grow cold,
To pimps and pets may crack his stories," etc.

I wish to ask you, sir, in behalf of others as well as myself, whether any such occurrence took place; or if it did not take place, please to state who that "other officer" was, if there was any such in the ambulance in which the President "was driving over the field (of Antietam) whilst details of men were engaged in the task of burying the dead." You will confer a great favor by an immediate reply.

Most respectfully your obedient servant,
A. J. PERKINS.

Lincoln's Reply

ALONG with the above I submitted to Mr. Lincoln my own draft of what I conceived to be a suitable reply. The brutal directness and falsity of the "World's" charge, and the still more brutal and insulting character of the doggerel with which it was garnished, impelled me to season my reply to Mr. Perkins' letter with a large infusion of "vinegar and gall." After carefully reading both letters, Mr. Lincoln shook his head. "No, Lamon," he said, "I would not publish this reply; it is too belligerent in tone in so grave a matter. There is a heap of 'cussedness' mixed up with your usual amiability, and you are at times too fond of a fight. If I were you, I would simply state the facts as they were. I would give the statement as you have it here, without the pepper and salt. Let me try my hand at it." He then took a pen and wrote the following. It was to be copied by me and forwarded to Mr. Perkins as my refutation of the slander.

"The President has known me intimately for nearly twenty years, and has often heard me sing little ditties. The battle at Antietam was fought on the 17th day of September, 1862. On the first day of October, just two weeks after the battle, the President, with some others including myself, started from Washington to visit the Army, reaching Harper's Ferry at noon of that day. In a short while General McClellan came from his headquarters near the battle-ground, joined the President, and with him reviewed the troops at Bolivar Heights that afternoon, and at night returned to his headquarters, leaving the President at Harper's Ferry. On the morning of the second the President, with General Sumner, reviewed the troops respectively at Loudon Heights and Maryland Heights, and at about noon started to General McClellan's headquarters, reaching there only in time to see very little before night. On the morning of the third all started on a review of the third corps and the cavalry, in the vicinity of the Antietam battle-ground. After setting through with General Burnside's corps, at the suggestion of General McClellan he and the President left their horses to be led, and went into an ambulance or ambulances to go to General Fitz John Porter's corps which was two or three miles distant. I am not sure whether the President and General McClellan were in the same ambulance, or in different ones; but myself and some others were in the same with the President. On the way, and on no part of the battleground, and on what suggestions I do not remember, the President asked me to sing the little sad song that follows, which he had often heard me sing, and had always seemed to like very much. I sang it. After it was over, some one of the party (I do not think it was the President) asked me to sing something else; and I sang two or three little comic songs, of which 'Picayune Butler' was one. Porter's corps was reached and reviewed; then the battle-ground was passed over, and the most noted parts examined; then, in succession, the cavalry and Franklin's corps were reviewed, and the President and party returned to General McClellan's headquarters at the end of a very hard, hot, and dusty day's work. Next day, the 4th, the President and General McClellan visited

FAREAST PACT MAY INCLUDE U.S.

Russian and British Spokesmen Discuss Extension of Locarno Agreement.

(Copyright, 1935, by A. P.)

Moscow, March 30—A "Far Eastern Locarno," in which the United States would help five other interested nations keep peace in that part of the world, was reported to have come under discussion at Anglo-Russian conversations here Friday.

Authoritative sources said Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, and Maxim Litvinoff, foreign commissar, both proposed to invite Captain Anthony Eden, British lord privy seal, extension of the Locarno security system to the Orient.

Included in the suggested pact, it was said, would be the United States, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, China, France and probably Japan.

Russians Enter Denial
Later, however, the Russians entered an official denial that they had proposed the Far Eastern pact. They declined to divulge the nature of the conversation between Eden and Stalin, saying only that the two went deeply into the international situation during their conference.

British quarters pointed out that Eden will have to report back to London before anything in the nature of an agreement for action to meet the dangers of war in Europe and Asia can be completed.

Observers said they believed the Anglo-Russian talks were revolving around three possibilities:

1. A way to compose Russo-German differences on the proposed Eastern European security pact.
2. British participation in some security arrangement without Germany if the latter refuses to enter on terms satisfactory to France.
3. Joint action through the League of Nations when the French raise the question of German's armament at the extraordinary session of the league council, opening April 15.

ROOSEVELT ENDS 17-YEAR DRY ERA IN CANAL ZONE

Washington, March 29 (AP)—President Roosevelt has ended the seventeen year dry era in the Panama Canal Zone by signing an executive order providing for the legal sale of alcoholic liquor under strict supervision and license.

The Canal Zone, under jurisdiction of American authorities, has been dry since July 1, 1913, when the issuance of licenses for saloons then operating ended.

Liquor was permitted to enter the zone, however, until June 18, 1918, when a war time army made the area "bone dry." The Volstead act of October 28, 1918, reinforced the army order.

DENIES ARIZONA INTENDS TO SEND "AMBASSADOR"

Phoenix, Ariz., March 29 (AP)—Gov. B. B. Moeur denied Thursday he ever intended to send an "ambassador" from Arizona to Washington.

"There has been a lot of capital made out of it without any ground to stand on," he asserted. "All of these moves are belittling Arizona in the eyes of the federal government and I fear it will impair our relief status. Every other state sends men to Washington on code hearings and on relief matters."

He expressed resentment of the name "ambassador," declaring it was tagged on a bill by the legisla-

ADVOCATES COLORADO ROUND UP ALL ALIENS

Denver March 30 (AP)—A plan to round up all aliens in Colorado into concentration camps and deport them was presented to Gov. Ed. C. Johnson Wednesday by Neil W. Kimball, adjutant-general of the Colorado National Guard.

Governor Johnson threatened Monday to call out the National Guard to patrol the state's borders if some action were not taken by federal immigration authorities to prevent migration of Mexicans to Colorado.

prevent migration of Mexicans to Colorado.

"Mexicans have been flocking into the state, driven from their country by hard times and drought," Governor Johnson said. "Not only are they taking relief funds which are needed for Colorado's own citizens, but in many cases are holding jobs that should be filled by Americans."
